How to Use This Index

The BAR Tenth Anniversary Index is really three indexes: a title index (pp. 1-7), an author index (pp. 9-17) and a subject index (pp. 19-37). Articles, book reviews and significant Letters to the Editor from BAR's first ten years are included.

Both reviewers and authors of books reviewed are listed in the author index. Titles of books appear in boldface italic type in the title and subject indexes and in italic type in the author index.

The subject index contains more than 300 headings. Archaeological sites covered in BAR are listed by name. Except for Tel Aviv, site names beginning with "Tel" or "Tell" are listed by their second word. (For example, Tel Masos is listed as "Masos, Tel.") When an article focuses almost exclusively on a particular historical period, it is listed under the heading for that period. For example, "An Israelite Village from the Days of the Judges" is indexed under "Judges, Period of." Articles reporting on sites whose remains span many periods—from the time of the Judges to the Hellenistic Age to the time of Roman rule, for instance—are not indexed under their historical periods in the subject index. Articles about archaeologists are listed under the archaeologist's name in the subject index and under the subject heading, "Archaeologists"; articles by archaeologists are found following the archaeologist's name in the author index.
